A vibrant photograph of a university campus. In the foreground, a wide set of concrete steps is populated by numerous students sitting, talking, and walking. The steps lead up a hillside. In the background, there are several large, multi-story buildings with stone and brick facades, interspersed with lush green trees. The sky is a clear, bright blue with a few wispy clouds. In the top right corner, there is a decorative graphic of white diagonal lines on a blue background.

CAMPUS LIFE

Study on our beautiful campus which combines impressive historic buildings and modern, award-winning developments. Experience our first-class teaching and research across a broad range of course topics designed not only to meet employers' needs but to address core issues facing the world.

YOUR LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

As a student here, you will benefit from access to both of our extensive libraries, which are open seven days a week with some spaces open 24 hours a day (opening times may vary outside of term time). Take advantage of nearly 300,000 books and a huge digital library of academic journals, e-books and databases, as well as a range of great study spaces.

You can use the campus-wide WiFi network or access your University account remotely. Use the University App to access your email, timetable, library, resource lists and receive direct targeted University information alongside many more features. Our Virtual Learning Environment, Canvas, offers you personalised course information, timetables, reminders and assessment feedback.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE SUPPORT

To improve your English language skills before you start your postgraduate course, we offer 6-week and 10-week pre-session courses. Find out more about our pre-session English language courses at winchester.ac.uk/study/international/english-language-courses/

We also have English language support available through the year once you are on your course. Tutors can help with language skills including academic reading, writing, speaking and listening. These one-to-one sessions can be tailored to your needs.

We require all international postgraduate students to have a minimum IELTS score of 6.0 overall with at least 5.5 in the writing element. Some of our courses have a higher IELTS requirement. UK Visas and Immigration have their own requirements for English language which may be different from the University. Please check your course webpage as well as the UK Visas and Immigration website for more information on requirements.

YOUR HOME FROM HOME

Where you live while you study is important. We have a broad range of University-managed accommodation, from on campus halls to off campus houses. If you are a full-time international fee-paying student, we guarantee you accommodation for your first year of study provided you apply for housing by our deadline. University-managed accommodation is often available for you beyond your first year of study if required. Please see winchester.ac.uk/housing for the latest information.

If you are organising your own accommodation and are a Student Route visa holder then you are required to live within 60 miles or have a travel time of 90 minutes or less from the University. All other students are encouraged to consider living within these distances as well.

To help give you a taste of the different types of housing on offer, watch our accommodation video: winchester.ac.uk/housing

Hear from Ian, a recent international graduate:

THE UNIVERSITY OF SANCTUARY

The University of Winchester has been offering scholarships for sanctuary seekers since 2010, and since this time we have offered 57 scholarships to support refugees and asylum seekers access Higher Education at Winchester. In 2018 we became the first University of Sanctuary in the South of England and later worked with partner organisations across Winchester to help establish Winchester as a City of Sanctuary.

In response to the situation in Afghanistan in 2021 we provided scholarships for Afghan students and supported the national charity Refugee Education UK with £10,000 seed funding and consultation for the development of the Displaced Students Initiative. More recently in 2022, we responded to the Ukraine crisis by launching a new scholarship for Ukrainian students that includes a fee waiver, bursary, access to a designated student advisor and access to a pre-sessional programme including English lessons.

Hear from one of our students, Sohaib, about his own personal development as a Sanctuary Award student:

'A dream is not what you see while sleeping; it is something that does not let you sleep. We are entitled to have dreams and fulfil dreams by working hard. We are not promised whether our dreams will come true, but we have hope. Hope is being able to see that there is light despite all the darkness. We are not all given equal talent, but we can expect equal opportunities to develop our talents and fulfil our dreams.

As a little boy aged 11, I also had multiple dreams; one day I will become a top cricketer and I will travel the world with my family. As we become older, we realise that not all our dreams are feasible, but we still should not stop dreaming. I had to learn this a difficult way. As a little boy aged 11 I had to flee my country Pakistan with my family and migrate to the UK, due to a political war. Leaving my close friends and my school had a detrimental impact on my mental health.

As a boy I was always trying to look for positives in negatives. As a naïve little boy, I did not realise what I was up against and had to suffer significantly through various rejections from the Home Office and not being allowed to go to school. I had to fight for basic human rights at every stage of my life. I was isolated in this country and could sense my dreams shattering. Through constant rejection, I grew stronger and always stated "rejection in life is just redirection". That was easier said than done, having no-one apart from my parents and seeing them struggle made me fragile, but I did not show this to anyone because the world was already cruel. Despite excelling at college and receiving unconditional offers from various universities, I was refused Student Finance due to my residence status. Despite this, I did not give up and, as they say, good things happen to those who keep trying.

One day I came across the University of Winchester and the Sanctuary Award. I saw hope. It only takes one person to change your life and I found that in Terri from the Widening Participation team at the University. She made me feel welcomed and helped me realise that I was a boy with dreams and my dreams were valid too. I had forgotten that I was only 18 at this point but was carrying the world on my back. I was awarded a scholarship to study Psychology; this changed my life.

However, the constant Home Office rejection continued, the stress was growing but the University of Winchester allowed me to feel supported. Without this, I would not have graduated. I fought for eleven years for my freedom and aged 22, was granted leave to remain in the UK. I did not know whether to cry of joy or to cry for the constant battle for human rights.

I grew stronger, I started working with vulnerable people ensuring they do not suffer and are redirected to the right support. Currently I continue to work with vulnerable victims and am due to complete my Masters in Criminology this year. My dream is to continue to raise awareness and support people in need. Without the University of Winchester and the Sanctuary Award, I would have been another little boy with dreams taken away from him. Thank you to the University of Winchester and I hope to repay the support I was given to others in need.'

Sohaib, born in Pakistan, developed in the UK

POSTGRADUATE COURSES

Animal Welfare

POSTGRADUATE COURSE

Animal Welfare, Behaviour, Ethics and Law, MSc \(distance learning\)

On this Distance Learning course, you will examine and communicate the importance of animal welfare to academic and other audiences, learning from highly qualified, enthusiastic and world-renowned teachers.

Animal Welfare, Behaviour, Ethics and Law at Winchester critically reflects upon contemporary uses of animals, and provides the academic skills and expertise needed to protect animals and advance their welfare. Winchester is a world leader in values such as animal welfare and environmental sustainability, which are central to the ethos of this course.

Students scrutinise the many forms of animal use in different settings, such as farming, transportation and slaughter, laboratories, homes, zoos and various other entertainment locales, and free-living animals in natural environments. The ethics of such animal uses are considered, along with key, related questions, such as how and to what degree society should reflect the interests of animals in its law-making and public policies. As students progress through the programme, they master the skills and knowledge involved in assessing the welfare of animals using scientific methods and data, and to advocate for animal welfare advancements using sound reasoning and scientific evidence.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

Graduates may enter careers within animal advocacy, welfare and conservation organisations; zoos, sanctuaries and other organisations requiring knowledge of animal management and welfare; governmental departments working on animal issues; assurance, inspection and enforcement agencies; and commercial organisations seeking to implement and monitor the animal welfare standards of their agricultural suppliers. For any veterinarians pursuing specialist qualifications in animal welfare, this programme is partly based on the theoretical syllabus required for the European and US qualifications.

'I was really pleased to find a course in Animal Welfare that was set up for distance learning – other commitments meant that I couldn't relocate, and so this offered the flexibility that I was after. The online learning platform Canvas is straightforward to navigate and quick to get used to with everything needed for the course accessible from one main location. The online lectures give you the opportunity to feel part of the class and to interact with the lecturer and other students, as well as the lectures being recorded and kept available online to review, or to catch up on if you can't attend at the time they're held.'

History, Archaeology and Politics

POSTGRADUATE COURSES

Cultural Heritage and Resource Management, MA

History, MA

Politics and International Relations, MA

Cultural Heritage and Resource Management considers the wider place of heritage management in contemporary society and offers you the chance to undertake your own projects on a range of different subjects. You investigate the theory and practice of cultural heritage and resource management from both a British and a global approach. Teaching comes from experts with specialisms in museums and galleries, cultural tourism, theme parks, national, local and global heritage organisations, archives, libraries, and archaeological units.

You have opportunities to participate in the department's own research projects, which have included archaeological sites in Winchester, Cornwall, Georgia, Armenia, Corsica, Barbados, Ethiopia and Egypt, and are encouraged to use your skills in enhancing and developing existing cultural heritage strategies in these locations. The course offers a perspective which, although grounded in UK heritage practice, is also situated within a wider global context and offers industry placements and project work abroad.

History at Winchester, taught by highly respected and experienced researchers, concentrates on different geographical scales of history, including local and global perspectives. It gives you the opportunity to engage with a range of approaches to the study of history, examining a range of historical subjects from ancient history to the present.

You start the course by exploring historical methods and research skills, followed by in-depth topic-based modules and the opportunity to devise and develop a specialist dissertation. The Approaches to the Past module, in the first semester, provides guidance on the different approaches to the study of history, including geographical scales of study and disciplinary approaches. Throughout the different modules you have opportunities to discuss and debate key themes with visiting speakers.

Our Politics and International Relations MA course examines government and society at the local, regional, and global level, enabling you to critically evaluate key issues in both contemporary and historical settings in a multidisciplinary approach from the economic, political, social and cultural from the perspective of state organisations, non-state bodies, and international institutions and groups.

You will examine the impact of politics on society from perspectives including international relations, business, climate change, nationalism, gender and non-governmental organisations and complete optional work and/or volunteer placements.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

Cultural Heritage and Resource Management MA graduates can work in organisations including heritage, museums, galleries, education, outreach, libraries, archives and archaeological units. History graduates work in academia, teaching, archives, libraries, government and civil service, museums and conservation. Politics graduates go on to careers in academia, teaching, banking and finance, the armed forces and government as well as in political consultancy.

'The course has undeniably aided me in both my personal and professional life. POSTGRADUATE COURSES

Death, Religion and Culture, MA \(distance learning\)

Reconciliation, PgCert, PgDip and MA \(distance learning\)

Reconciliation and Peacebuilding, PgCert, PgDip and MA \(distance learning\)

Our Reconciliation and Peacebuilding programmes provide a deep, critical understanding of the most prevalent root causes of interpersonal and intercommunal conflicts and insights into how the foundations for a more peaceful future between the parties can be initiated and sustained. Key concepts and theories are applied to a wide range of case studies providing critical insights into how theory relates to practice. Special attention is given to the impact of faith, culture and colonialism on the study and practices of reconciliation and peacebuilding.

The programmes are delivered through decolonised, interactive, collaborative and inclusive learning and teaching approaches that value students' experiences and contributions. Students become part of a vibrant and supportive virtual learning community. The programmes provide opportunities for students to become actively involved in peacebuilding and reconciliation projects and support them in developing transferable skills that will enhance their employability.

Death, Religion and Culture at Winchester is a distance learning course that explores the universal reality of death. With a wide range of modules led by an interdisciplinary field of scholars, you can customise the course to explore death in accordance with your interests – whether you want to focus on its religious, social, philosophical, artistic, ethical or political dimensions. You will study the ways in which death and dying are understood differently by various cultures and religious traditions, and how those understandings are played out in rituals of death, dying and bereavement. The course also allows you to explore how death is represented in the arts, in literature and the sciences. Students will have the chance to investigate contemporary ethical questions surrounding death, from end-of-life decisions to dark tourism, climate change and AI.

The programme attracts a diverse range of students including funeral directors, clergy from a variety of traditions, teachers, nurses and those preparing for a research degree, as well as a range of people who are simply fascinated by the subject. This dynamic group ensures that your debates and discussions are lively and informed by a breadth of interests and experiences.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

Reconciliation and Peacebuilding graduates pursue careers working in the fields of international development, conflict management, peacebuilding and international relations. This work is often in international and local Non-Governmental Organisations and government, civil service and peacekeeping institutions such as the United Nations and the European Union.

Death, Religion and Culture graduates have gone on to work within bereavement counselling, funeral homes, palliative care, teaching and the church.

'Studying Higher Education focused on peace and humanitarian aid has been quite valid during this crisis. I've been able to apply my skills from this MA which was very valuable and practical to me. I've had to use the knowledge from my degree for my work and I was even able to support my organisation in business development.'

Psychology and Criminology

POSTGRADUATE COURSES

Applied Criminology, MSc

Applied Sport Psychology, MSc

Forensic Psychology, MSc

Can you eliminate the impossible to find the truth, however improbable? Whether you're pursuing a career as a consulting detective or a more conventional route into the world of criminology, Applied Criminology equips you with the skills and knowledge to enter your chosen profession. Explore the fascinating and complex world of crime, deviance, security and insecurity as they relate to careers in crime prevention, detection and security and research. Develop your understanding of criminological concepts and methods and how they're used in professional contexts, with opportunities to gain direct experience through a work placement or internship.

MSc Applied Sport Psychology provides you with the opportunity to extend your theoretical understanding of sport and exercise psychology in a supportive environment. This programme draws on the strengths of a sport and exercise psychology team, who are actively conducting their own research, to provide you with a programme that supports your career aspirations of working as a sport and exercise psychologist. It enables you to become an evidence-based practitioner who is an active problem-solver, providing the best psychological solutions to the challenges you encounter. The course has been developed for individuals who possess Graduate Basis for Chartership (GBC) with the British Psychological Society (BPS). The programme is accredited by the BPS, and provides the first stage in a training process towards becoming a Chartered Sport and Exercise Psychologist.

MSc Forensic Psychology is accredited by the British Psychological Society (BPS[†]) and provides the academic component (Stage 1) of the route to becoming a Chartered Forensic Psychologist with full membership of the BPS's Division of Forensic Psychology and Practitioner Forensic Psychologist status with the Health and Care Professions Council.

The programme supports you with the transition towards Stage 2 of the chartership process by incorporating practice-based assessments. The course introduces the context and application of psychology in various forensic settings including the legal and criminal justice system, forensic psychological practice and forensic mental health. The programme focuses on core theoretical models with an emphasis on best practice alongside theoretical, practical and methodological limitations.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

Applied Criminology graduates work in the fields of policing and security, research and in academia. Forensic Psychology graduates pursue careers in various specialisms within forensic psychology, including further training to become Chartered Forensic Psychologists. The knowledge and transferable skills acquired can also be useful for a career as a mental health practitioner, crime analyst or researcher. Applied Sports Psychology graduates go into teaching, coaching and working in the sports business industry.

[†] Forensic Psychology MSc is scheduled for a Partnership Visit with the BPS during 2022/23 to confirm reaccreditation

'The course is driven by forward-thinking academics and practitioners who offer in-depth insight into forensic psychology practice. Teaching is further enriched with forensic trips, such as to Winchester Crown Court. Other links with key professional and academic institutions help develop essential skills, knowledge and confidence.'

Social Work

POSTGRADUATE COURSES

Applied Social Studies (top-up), MA

Practice Education \(Social Work\), PgCert \(distance learning\)

Social Work, MSc

Social Work MSc is a professional qualification covering the main knowledge, skills and values essential for practising as a newly qualified social worker. Successful completion of this programme makes you eligible to register as a social worker with Social Work England[†].

You cover the key knowledge base of social work – social policy, legislation, aspects of psychology and sociology, social work theory, and social work methods and communication. The course provides an introduction to the development of professional identity and the acquisition of professional values. You discuss the complexities and importance of interprofessional working; develop an understanding of the importance of sociological and psychological perspectives across the life course; and gain a critical understanding of different types of interventions underpinned by legislation and social policy. There is a key introductory module which enforces the concept of professional, reflective practice and professional boundaries.

The course includes two practice learning placements – 70 days in the first year and 100 days in the second year, and each placement is matched to your needs, aptitude and experiences. On completion of the course, you will have a good knowledge of risk and assessment, a clear sense of the opportunities and demands of being a professional social work practitioner, and the skills and knowledge required at a newly qualified level.

The Postgraduate Certificate in Practice Education is for experienced practitioners interested in supporting and developing learning in their professional workplace. It is appropriate for anyone with the responsibility for supporting student learning and workforce development/education within community healthcare, NHS, local authorities, private, social care or voluntary services. It is divided into two equally-weighted modules, which are mapped to the Social Work Practice Educator Professional Standards (PEPS) stages 1 and 2. It is a Distance Learning course delivered flexibly, with significant opportunities for application, on-the-job learning and research.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

Social Work MSc is approved by Social Work England which means you'll be eligible to apply for registration as a social worker on successful completion of the course[†]. Successful completion of the Practice Education programme is likely to lead to advancement in your social care profession, workforce development or educator role.

'The Social Work staff were very approachable and passionate throughout the course, offering encouragement and support for a fast-paced and intensive course. Even once the course had come to an end, the staff at the university were ready to help with job applications and interview preparation to help our future careers.'

Sport and Exercise, MRes \(distance learning\)

MSc Applied Sport Psychology provides you with the opportunity to extend your theoretical understanding of sport and exercise psychology in a supportive environment. This programme draws on the strengths of a sport and exercise psychology team, who are actively conducting their own research, to provide you with an academic programme that supports your career aspirations of working as a sport and exercise psychologist. It enables you to become an evidence-based practitioner who is an active problem-solver, providing the best psychological solutions to the challenges you encounter.

The course has been developed for individuals who possess Graduate Basis for Chartership (GBC) with the British Psychological Society (BPS). The programme is accredited by the BPS, and therefore provides the first stage in a training process towards becoming a Chartered Sport and Exercise Psychologist.

Sport and Exercise MRes equips you to develop your expertise in a specific aspect of sport and exercise. It offers bespoke postgraduate provision from a wide range of sport and exercise-focused backgrounds, giving you the opportunity to tailor your programme of study to your own specific area of interest.

You can focus on physiology, biomechanics, coaching, sociology, strength and conditioning, business, exercise and health, or medicine. You are supported in making this choice, and your specialism is reflected in the title of the degree you are awarded. The programme also offers you the opportunity to undertake a substantial year-long research project of your choice under the guidance of expert staff from the Department of Sport and Exercise.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

MRes Sport and Exercise graduates progress to a wide range of professions, including academia. A particularly strong route is going onto a Doctoral research programme (PhD) or obtaining professional qualifications in the sport and exercise sciences (BASES). Other avenues include teaching, coaching, and working in the sports business industry..

'The MSc programme at Winchester provided me with an excellent foundation from which to pursue a career as a sport psychologist in elite sport. In particular, I really appreciated the opportunity it provided for weekly small group discussions with lecturers who have extensive applied experience themselves.'

WORLD-LEADING RESEARCH

Research

POSTGRADUATE COURSE

Postgraduate Research, MPhil/PhD

When you pursue a research degree such as a MPhil, PhD or Professional Doctorate you will be working alongside inspirational research-active academics, many of whom are leaders in their respective fields. Our reputation for research excellence is growing as we continue to deliver impact at regional, national and international levels.

As a postgraduate research student, your work on a chosen topic will be managed in collaboration with a supervisory team, lead by a Director of Studies. You will be supported to produce a thesis or creative work, supported by contextual materials which you will defend in a viva voce exam.

RESEARCH OCCURS ACROSS ALL OF OUR FACULTIES, AND INCLUDES WORK WHICH SEEKS TO:

Protect children online:

Dr Emma Nottingham's research has been instrumental in supporting the UK in its ambition to become a world leader in technology which protects children online. Her research recommendations on the use of images and sharing of information on children on social media have been implemented into law, policy and practice and have led to the development of a more robust framework to protect children in the digital world.

Promote responsible management and sustainability through Higher Education:

Winchester's adoption of the UN-backed Principles for Responsible Management Education (PRME), and its role as a PRME Champion mean it is a pioneer in embedding ethics, social responsibility and sustainability and the UN's Sustainable Development Goals into its own teaching, research and community engagement. Work by researchers from the University of Winchester Business School on the development and implementation of the PRME has impacted on the UN PRME organisation itself, teaching approaches and practices in Business and Management schools nationally in the UK and across the globe.

Raise awareness of alternative masculinities within the culture of sport and encourage greater acceptance of LGBT communities within sport:

Professor Eric Anderson and Dr Matthew Smith's research has had widespread media coverage and helped increase society's acceptance of homosexuality and understanding of alternative masculinities within the area of sport. The research has resulted in numerous instances of media coverage, engagement with government and policy makers and a measurable attitudinal change within the wider population.

Visit winchester.ac.uk/courses for more information including full entry requirements, tuition fees and modules. Please see full course listing on page 48.

Your future

A postgraduate research degree at Winchester will prepare you for work in a wide range of professions. Our graduates work in academia, teaching, government agencies, charities and sports associations.

'One of the most rewarding aspects of being a PhD candidate has been the opportunity to work with fantastically inspiring people both inside and outside the institution. These colleagues have encouraged me to pursue creative ideas outside of my comfort zone, including chairing a journal club and recording a podcast series. The challenge of the PhD has been excellent for my personal growth and has reinforced my desire to pursue a career in public health research.'
