Perspectives at the UE

The field of psychology includes current scientifically based concepts of individual and business coaching, work with personnel selection and supervision, leadership, marketing, occupational health management as well as independent consulting activities, such as management consultancy.

We teach you concepts and fields of implementation of coaching and counselling, and offer you a specialisation in general and business psychology during your studies. Our methodological and scientific subjects, such as diagnostics, are closely linked with our own research and practical projects and therefore promote counselling-oriented and entrepreneurial thinking and action with a psychological and scientific foundation. There is also the possibility to take a digital elective module at the Cambridge College in Boston.

After the master's degree in Psychology, you can work in the following fields: consulting in business and industry, coaching with private individuals, counselling centres, public institutions and other management positions in the health and business sectors.

people (in outpatient care facilities), counselling of and preventive work with children, young people and families (in counselling facilities), prevention and intervention measures, research activities as well as activities in the health and counselling sector.
